I know you have to go

I know you have to go, i wish that you would stay
I'm panicked that i won't survive without you for one day
The hole inside my belly like a homesick little boy
Every day without you another moment without joy

I know you have to go, i'll take you to the plane
The thought of living solo has me feeling quite insane
The odd thing is i don't really like you all that much
I'm just addicted to your attention, desperate for your touch

Jeff Heiskell of the Judybats wrote the song that made me weep
Though i hate it when you wake, i love to watch you sleep
I know you have to go, and frankly i don't care
But when you leave i'll wretched pine and out the window stare

That's love for me
Pretty much All chemistry infantile i must admit
But that's what you get
Maybe it's how i was raised
Maybe my dna
Even at 53
That's love for me

I know you have to go, I support your choice
T'would be unacceptable my loneliness to voice
Like an abandoned child, once again alone
A parasitic lover, for which I can't atone
