I've always held the key

Those of us who complain that happiness eludes
Who cautiously examine and reject exotic foods
Those of us whose lives by choice the darkness shrouds
Let us be reminded that there's always sun above the clouds

Those of us who gnash our teeth as politicians lie
Whose jealousy is galling the inequity decry
Those of us who find our sweetest spot in drama's rage
Interesting we don't see we've constructed our own cage

Those of us who say we are the victim of the man
Who angrily proclaim that the entire system is a sham
Those of us who cannot make it without a glass of wine
There is a place where we can live and everything is fine

I know this to be true
I'm no different from you
That i've always held the key, the key that sets me free

I've always held the key to find my place in the sun
To live each moment marveling, not trying to be done
Done with all the silly things, we're convinced it's just our plight
That no matter how hard we toil, sufferings our plight

But i am here to tell you, i know i hold the key
It's really oh so simple, all i need to do is be
Accept each feeling and each breath, and never ever run
The key is to remember, you can always choose the sun
