I was watching old friends beavis and butthead the other day
Their wisdom is transcendent if you listen to what they say
When people babble on as if they're desperate for attention
My animated buddies call them out on their pretension

Words words words, these shamen true observe
Anyone who doubts their wisdom has a lot of nerve
The self-righteous intellectual thinks he's worthy of your ear
Truth he's a pompous ass, and let me be more clear

The most offensive creature is professor loves-his-brain
He preaches from his pulpit, self-concerned though quite inane
He thinks that all should listen, those who don't upon he frowns
He doesn't recognize that he's another babbling clown

Words word words, would you kindly shut your trap
Aren't you at all aware that you're entirely full of crap
Aren't you the least bit embarrassed by your need to be heard
By your assumption that everyone should hang on your every word
