Shallow waters

Shallow waters seem so safe
There's no way that i can drown
Ankle deep and splashing about
I'll be fine if i fall down

But deceiving are these waters so
Like a momentary lapse of thought
For even in what seems so quiet
Turbulence is often wrought

The metaphor is plain to see
The shark patrols so close to shore
The deeper waters while frighteningly dark
Perhaps are those we can ignore

It's in the places we feel safe
When we are prone to walking blind
That toes are stubbed and down we go
The pitfalls of the daily grind

So even though we shouldn't live
In fear and thus not venture forth
The shallow waters need our care
And that's my song for what it's worth
