She was tempted

She was tempted i tell myself
She thought i was cute
She smiled when my eyes met her
That you can't refute
She was tempted to make a choice
she may have felt regret
In the end she walked on by
I wasn't that upset

She was tempted i tell myself
But she didn't inquire
Truth is I just want to feel like women
Still feel some desire
That they look at me and think
Now there's a sexy dude
That my winks and silver locks
Put them in the mood
But i know it's a little bit
Of silly self delusion
She was tempted i know is really
My own form of confusion

Growing old with grace and pride
Is not my favorite thing
I want the women to think i'm Worthy of a ring
But deep down in my heart of hearts
I know age had preempted
And it's just my little fantasy
That she was actually tempted
