

393-1000
That's why We're here

I'm not really in the mood to write this song
I'd rather pull the pillow over my head
I had a friend who used to live in my house on wallace st
I just found out three years late my friend is dead

We'd lost touch when she ventured off to foreign lands
I was busy chasing storms and marrying a wife
And now stumbling about i find out she is gone
Sometimes i wonder how we make sense of this crazy life

Why is it we always seem to lose the brightest ones
The ones whose smiles ever shimmer like the northern lights
The ones whose hearts are truest and whose love can set us free
The ones who somehow pull us through the darkest of the nights

And now honor them, their memory and their lives
We spread the message of their love and to hold that spirit high
And in doing so we not only have a chance to save the world
But keeping that flame e'er burning these souls will never die

And that's why we're here
We have a sacred role to play
That's why we're here
To spread some love just for today
That's why we're here
Cast aside anger and hate
That's why we're here
There isn't one moment to wait
