

575-1000
The beginning of time

The beginning of time and then the end
And those who die are born again
Each breath we take we have the chance
To hold each other close and dance
For in the air each molecule
The very wind that is the fuel
Was once the air that filled your sails
And in each and every deep inhale
I may be breathing the same air
We shared when we made love so fair
And every breath is full of love
The exhale guided from above
And knowing this while sorrow lives
My heart is open and forgives
For every breath since time began
Inside my soul will someday land
And every cry of ecstasy is part of you and part of me
So never forget this truth sublime
That we've been together since the beginning of time