The ones i shunned

The ones i shunned were the ones that i perceived
Refused no matter how hard i tried to show they liked me
And so i hated them i did because they couldn't see
They just couldn't see

The ones i shunned held views that i didn't hold
And they refused to change their mind on things even when i told
Don't they know i'm always right, how could they be so bold
Be so bold

The ones i shunned were filled with happiness and joy
They found life so magical, like a big yummy toy
I decided they were lying and my heart they did annoy
They did annoy

The ones i shunned had more money than i did
I hated the richest ones even when twas a kid
If i'd had the chance of them the world i would have rid
Would have rid

The ones i shunned were the ones i couldn't buy
They refused to listen to my tales, despite my most skilled lie
I made my mind up early on though never ever cry
Never cry

I shunned em all
They has such gall
To not like me
Didn't they see
I was great
And now too late
A life undone
For all i've shunned
