This won't hurt

Someone told me long ago that i would find my love
She or he would be a gift, a match from god above
Together we would face the world, partners to the end
Looking deep into our eyes, nothing to defend

But for me love has come at quite a hefty cost
When I fall I fall too deep and often feel so lost
This is not really love, the addict in my knows
I need my lover like the heroin through others veins flows

Robin Williams told me that the good stuff is mundane
Bad breath in the morning, teeth with coffee stains
These are things that will not matter when you've found your mate
Forever and a day for your true love you will wait

But I live on the surface
I face the world alone
I cannot let you in too far
My darkness to be shone
If I fall in love with you
It's only chemistry
I beg that you see through my eyes
That way you can be free

I live on the surface
Not unlike a leech
I'll seem like the perfect guy
My love for you beseech
But I am not a partner
I am more a flirt
And I will face the world alone
At least then it won't hurt
