Watch your step

Watch your step, said the man in the chair
Don't say a word, pretend not to care
These are things better left unsaid
Watch your step, be careful where you tread

Hold your tongue, the truth matters not
Everything in this world can be bought
You may not be guilty, but you could still end up in jail
And lest you forget, i'm the one who sets the bail

Sign this agreement, and then you must adhere
As long as you play my game, you needn't live in fear
I can be your ally, or i can be your foe
It's up to you to choose which way you will go

Do you understand the conditions i've laid out?
Do you recognize that in this world you have no clout?
Play along and you will live a free and happy man
Contradict in any way or throw a wrench into my plan

And you will know a life in which suffering abounds
I will live in luxury and you'll live underground
This is just the way that this game has played out
I will crush you my friend, i hope you have no doubt

And so the man in the chair rose and said goodbye
The warning had been issued, my choice not to defy
I closed my mouth and marched in step, i pretended not to see
And all around me people died still struggling to be free

In my defense i chose this path for my children's sake
The man in the chair without a flinch from my kids would take
Their father if he expressed an opinion of his own
And so i marched and closed my eyes, and for this i can't atone

All around this tragic globe sits a man in a chair
He directs to make himself feel strong, his ego is laid bare
And in his wake the millions cry as life to him is cheap
The sadness of our species, what we sow is what we reap
