You'll see the sign

When she wants to break it off, you'll see the sign
She'll kiss you on the cheek and advances will decline
When you query as to problems she'll say everything is fine
But you will know the truth and the time is soon for cryin'

When the boss never smiles and your job is on the line
You'll know pretty quickly as you will see the sign
He doesn't ask you to take the firm's guests to dine
And to your newest interview you will soon be flyin'

When no one really listens as you wax and then opine
Their indifference to your input, you will see the sign
After work you go straight home while colleagues enjoy some wine
You just figured out the no one takes to you a shine

You will see the sign
If you open up your eyes
No one really likes you
Here are a few whys
You're distant and aloof
You come across as fake
You tend to give a tiny bit whilst more and more you take
You have a spicy temper
People walk on shells
And despite all of your grooming
Your breath still really smells
And one more thing to note here
Your act nobody's buyin'
Just look around the room my friend
You will see the sign
